

A photograph of a family of four (two adults and two children) fishing from a small motorboat on a calm lake. The lake is surrounded by high, rugged, brown rock cliffs. The scene is bathed in warm, golden light, suggesting late afternoon or early morning. The water reflects the surrounding cliffs and the boat.

CANCER FOUGHT HERE

When family members are there for one another, people are better able to develop the strong mental attitude that is such an important part of beating cancer. If you're fortunate enough to live in Nevada, you don't have to leave your home state to get the most technically advanced cancer care possible. Your doctor, family and Nevada Cancer Institute are all right here for you. Now more than ever, cancer is treatable and beatable.
